-A lady, after looking carefully through Christian College, with a view of entering her daughter said that she had inspected three other colleges and that the bed-rooms in C. C. were by far the most comfortable and attractive that she had seen. The ceilings are 12 and 14 feet, and there are three and four windows to each room. The furniture is all new and open grates and mantles are over nearly the whole house.

-An entertainment will be given early in April for the benefit of the college library. A small admission will be charged. The entertainment will be well worth the price of admission, and the money cannot be appropriated to a better purpose than building a well-selected library, which is to be the property of Christian College. Libraries induce young people to read, and good, solid reading makes good, quiet, intelligent citizens.

THE Pollard-Breckinridge case is on trial and the dailies are filled with it ad nauseum. Mrs. Gov. Blackburn testified as she had deposed, that Col. Breckinridge told her he was going to marry ence in court would not have been necline of defense is not apparent yet, but 1,217. it is thought that a plea will be made that the promise of marriage was made under a threat and while the defendant thought he was in danger of great bodily harm. This baby act will hardly work in court and here in Kentucky it wont soldier, who never flickers when the the place. gauntlet of battle is thrown down. The Louisville Times strikes centre when it says that there is not left one redeeming feature upon the repulsive face of postmaster at Middlesboro. this liason, into which enter the elements of leachery, lying and hypocrasy. The whole long debauch appears to have been conducted from beginning to end England is about $1,000,000 a week. upon the dead sea level of original sin. It is a low police court case of total depravity, unrelieved by a solitary sidelight indicating any impulse on his part to raise a mortal to the skies or design on hers to draw an angel down. A ride nery, Pa. in the Black Maria would be its fit finale.

THE Wilson bill, so emasculated and metamorphosed that its author would not recognize it were he to meet it on the highway, has been reported by the buildings was $15,160. Iron ore and coal will have a tariff of 40 cents a ton, while other less important articles are taken from the free list. The income tax is retained with some changes and the whisky tax is increased to $1.10 with a bonded period of eight years. The time that the bill will go into effect has been changed from June 1st to the 30th. and so on. The Wilson bill is far from fulfilling the promises of the platform. The Senate bill is scarcely an improvement on the KcKinley iniquity. Verily the democratic lawmakers are getting the party in the middle of a very bad fix.

The result was that a jury, on Saturday last, declared the drunken murderer guilty only of "involuntaryman slaughter" and gave him one year in jail and a fine of $1,000. Even this light verdictiwas a surprise to the defendant who immediately moved for a new trial. Doubtless he will get it and be acquitted next time.

COUGHLIN, who was once convicted for life of complicity in the murder of Dr. Cronin, whose body was found in the man hole of a sewer at Chicago several years ago, was acquitted last week after a remarkable trial which lasted four months. The other two men convicted at the same time that he was, died in prison, although no more guilty than he. Strange indeed are the contradictory results of alleged courts of justice.

THE value of the law's delay to criminals has again been proven. A WOMAN OF TALENT.

Against Obstacles.

Mrs. Walworth was born in Philadelphia 52 years ago. Her father was German gentleman of rank and talents who came to this country on account of political troucies in his own land. His name was Hadermann. He married, soon after coming to this country, a young lady of Baltimore. Mrs. Walworth was thrown upon her own resources at a very early age. Her first effort at self support was as a governess, and later her eminent qualifications inclined her to literature. Her success has been won, against many discouraging obstacles, by force of inborn talent and a fine, courageous rial poison, which caused my appetite to fail, and I was greatly reduced in flesh, and life lost all its charms. I tried mercurial and potash remedies, but to no effect. I could get no relief. I then decided to try S.S.S. A few bottles of this wonderful medicine made a complete and permanent cure, and I now enjoy better health than ever. J. A. RICE, Ottawa, Kan.

LIFE HAD NO CHARMS. For three years I was troubled with mala-

LABOR SAVING COW STALL. Neat and Handy Device For Making It Clean Itself.

Mr. J. C. Early of Virginia has invented a self cleaning cow stall, which is described in The American Agriculturist. His ideas about cow stables would, if adopted, save much labor, both in feeding cows and cleansing their stables. The description of stall and feeding arrangements is as follows: In feeding, in place of troughs there is a smooth floor without obstruction running in front of all the cows and 5 feet wide and on the same level as the floors of the stalls, so the cows can feed without waste. There are long, narrow bins for grain at close intervals on the outside of this floor, so that the grain can be taken in a scoop and poured to each cow without carrying heavy loads from a distant mealroom. The silage is shoveled into a wheelbarrow and is wheeled and dumped in front of each

FLOOR OF SELF CLEANING COW STALL. cow, the long level feed floor making this as easy as running a car on a track. Above the cow stable is the room for hay and forage, which is all cut fine by horsepower and distributed over the room by a carrier attached to the cutter, which sets in the center of the long room. When used, after filling to one end it is turned around and run until the opposite end is filled. There is a chute (a) between every two cows, and the cut forage runs down without the use of a basket or fork. The partitions are between every two cows and are only 3 feet long, with a tive. tight board floor of the same length. Back of this, extending to sills of stable, there is a trapdoor, the length that the stall is wide and hinged to sill of stable, so as to raise up to get out manure. This door is made of 3 inch strips, nailed to five 2 by 4 inch scantling and one inch apart. This door has a space 8 inches wide immediately back of the cow's hind feet for the manure to drop through. This space has a door, simply a board 8 inches wide, which is hinged on the side farthest from the cow and let down when the cows go in or out and then raised and kept up for the manure to drop through while the cows are in the stable. This space must be regulated to each pair of cows, which is easily done by using more or less of the 3 inch strips next to the solid floor. The cows stand with their hind feet and their back parts over the grating. The manure pit extends partly under the cows and will hold more than a month's ings in front of the stalls.

Feeding Lambs For Early Market. To make the raising of early lambs profitable it is important that they be in fine condition when ready for marhet and that they be ready to sell early. Much depends upon the feed and care. Of all stock on the farm young lambs are the most difficult to push without a setback. At almost any stage of the feeding a little overfeeding will give them a setback that will require several days to overcome. For the first three weeks at least the lambs must depend upon the mother's milk. In beginning to feed the ewes start with a light ration and gradually increase. If the ewes are fed on too rich material, there is always a risk of giving the lambs the Com nerce Building, Louisville scours, and this should always be avoided. With a little care at the start the ewes may be fed a ration sufficient to enable them to supply all the milk necessary for the lambs to make a thrifty, vigorous growth from the start. Wheat bran, oilmeal, cornmeal and ground oats all make a good ration for ewes that are suckling lambs. Of course they must have clover hay in abundance. When the lambs run with the ewes all the time and the ewes are fed on ground feed, the lambs will usually begin eating when they are about 3 weeks old. Then it will pay to arrange a place where they can help themselves. At first they will eat but little, but gradualfy they will learn to eat and will thrive much better than if they must

A very little feed will do at first. Under no circumstances should they be given more than they will eat up clean. As they learn to eat the ration can be gradually increased, the quantity being determined by the condition of the depend entirely upon their mother's lambs and their appetite. By using care in feeding a rapid gain may be secured at comparatively a low cost, and if the lambs are kept gaining steadily they can be ready for market

The earlier and the better the condition when marketed the higher the price. A few days' delay even with the same lambs will often make a considerable difference in the price obtained.—St. Louis Republic.

Galloway Cattle.

The Galloway may be described as a short legged, hornless, black, heavy bodied animal with a thick, shaggy coat. These cattle ere beef producers and do not excel in the dairy. They grow quickly, fatter readily and yield a good carcass of excellent beef. The hide is very valuable and is much used for robes and coats. No claims are made for the Galloways as regards milk and butter.

They Wanted Willie.

Relatives of the old fashioned sort are sad disturbers of the dignity of the rising generation, especially when they trotout pet names in public, as all fond parents of the old fashioned sort invariably insist on doing. It's a difficult thing for a parent to realize, anyway, that his child has grown up.

There is a young man in a position of great trust in one of the largest mercantile establishments of this town. He came from the country originally, but would rather have that forgotten. Yesterday a little old man entered the counting room. He was done up in about five lengths of red and yellow scarf and gave other evidences of hailing from the latitude of Johnson's creek or Findley's lake.

"Is Willie in?" he asked the clerk at
